Re: Your Misstatements About the Sarlo Foundation and Family

Dear Mr. Morris:

This office represents the Sarlo Family Foundation ("Foundation").

Recently, you were interviewed on an episode of the Danny Jones Podcast, which was originally distributed on May 19, 2025, and is available widely on various streaming platforms (e.g., https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ycv90Ab5C7g). During your discussion, you extolled the latest version of your conspiracy theory about the "conspiracy to derail psychedelic drugs" (a topic also discussed by you previously on Adam Strauss' podcast in December 2024). We have carefully reviewed the transcript of the Danny Jones Podcast, and in particular the section called "The Sarlo Family Foundation", which begins at 1:30:17, at which point you commence a series of misstatements and untruths concerning George Sarlo and his Foundation.

Your statements recklessly disregarded the truth. The Foundation is not an "anti-psychedelic organization," as you claim. This is patently and provably false. The Foundation was founded by a man who experienced significant trauma as a child; trauma one hopes you will never experience. He established his Foundation to fund other organizations to reduce the pain of individuals. The Foundation now focuses on nurturing the well-being of youth. Protecting children is a major goal. The Foundation is a way for the founder to protect others from the trauma he experienced. Public records demonstrate the Foundation's record of funding good, honest projects.

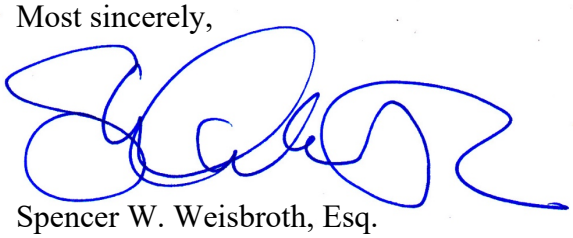
Also, there are credible news articles telling the story of how Mr. Sarlo was abused by a woman who was a member of MAPS Board of Directors (she was not an employee, as you stated). This matter, though, is one about which Mr. Sarlo deserves privacy. But if you are going to tell the story, get it right. Your conjecture, expressed in your discussions, is wrong.

In simple terms, many of the statements you made about Mr. Sarlo, his family, and his Foundation are libelous and slanderous. Such defamation must necessarily entail the risk of legal action and if it continues, you will give us no choice but to advise our client to commence appropriate legal action. Assuming you have any proof of your libelous claims we demand you send us the documents and evidence within thirty days of the above date. It should be evidence that would be acceptable in a court of law. Your failure to do so may be taken as an admission by you that you cannot prove your false statements.

It is easy to create a conspiracy theory if one disregards true facts and neglects to investigate the truth. You have made demonstrably false statements about the Foundation, its founder, and his family, and that is actionable defamation. You have caused harm to the reputation and wellbeing of good people who are trying to help others. We demand that you cease making further false statements or insinuations about George Sarlo, his family, or his Foundation. Failure to abide by this reasonable demand is likely to require that you produce such evidence in a court of law. We expect that will be impossible since no such evidence exists.

We await your response with interest.

Most sincerely,



Spencer W. Weisbroth, Esq.
